ABSTRACT

This report prepared for instructional media specialists provides data on the program of services, the size of the staff, and the size and extent of facilities for instructional media programs in the schools of Wisconsin. Information is displayed separately for senior high schools, middle schools, and elementary schools, with further subdivisions by the size of the district by enrollment, and by building size. This permits comparisons of a specific program with programs of other schools of the same size and grade level in similar size districts. The statistics for Milwaukee schools have been omitted to preserve anonymity. (RAA)

INTRODUCTION

This report has been prepared to enable instructional media specialists to compare the program of services, the size of the staff, the size and extent of facilities, or other elements of the instructional media program in their own schools with the programs of other school buildings of the same size and grade level in similar size districts.

The report has been structured as follows: First, schools are grouped according to grade levels. Section I includes statistics for senior high schools (grades 8-12, 9-10, 9-12, 10-12, 11-12). Section II includes statistics for junior high and middle schools (grades 5-8, 5-9, 6-7, 6-8, 7-8, 7-9, 8-9). Section III includes the statistics for elementary schools (grades K-7 or any combination of grades therein). Schools with any other combination of grades have not been included in this analysis.

Within these grade-level groupings, schools are broken down into eight district sizes, according to enrolment. Each of these is subdivided into eight building sizes. The statistics for Milwaukee schools were excluded to maintain anonymity.

IMPORTANT: The numbers in the tables indicate the number of schools in a given district and building-size category reporting a given statistic on the profile form ("Instructional Media Profile, 1977-78, PI 2417"). Example: Chart 1 of this report reveals that in school district size A (enrolling 10,000-49,000 students), the high school buildings with enrolments between 1,400 and 1,849 answered the questionnaire in the following way: Of all the high schools in this category, 4 schools have one full-time librarian employed; 4 schools have two librarians; 0 schools have three librarians; and 0 schools have four librarians. The next column within that same group of schools shows that 1 school has one audiovisual coordinator; 0 schools have more than one. Further on, 4 schools report one audiovisual director; 0 have more than one, and so on. The column headed "Total Certified Staff" shows that, within that same group of schools, 1 school has only one certified professional; but 7 of the schools have two certified professionals; and 2 schools have a total of three certified professionals. The combination of professionals making up these totals in the individual schools is unknown.

At the end of the row, under the asterisk, is the number 10. This indicates the total number of schools in this size category; i.e., there are ten high schools in Wisconsin with enrolments of 1,400 -1,849 in school districts of 10,000-49,999 students.

The number of schools reporting a statistic is more significant than an average of responses from all the schools in that category. Averages mean little while a cluster at a certain level is meaningful. In the example cited above, the fact that most of the large high schools employ two professionals has significance.

The structure of the information in this report follows the arrangement of the "Instructional Media Profile" and the booklet "Planning for Instructional Media Programs, 1977-82."

To compare your program with that of other schools, simply compare the answers on your copy of the "Instructional Media Profile, 1977-78" with the statistics reported for your size school in your size district. If you would like assistance, please write to:
